Conference Features:

This global summit conference offers two days of wide-ranging presentations by over 15 EMDR thought leaders. Presentations have been selected that offer concise portrayals of a range of innovative conceptual approaches combined with practice intervention ideas.

THE NEED:

Interpersonal violence is one of the greatest causes of human trauma. An insidious violation of human sanctity, the traumatizing and lasting effects are well documented. Yet treatments that foster meaningful recovery for survivors of violence are limited in both availability and impact. Furthermore, interventions targeted to reduce or prevent the perpetuation of human violence are even more scarce. Unaddressed, the “cycle of violence” continues and can be observed within a wide range of types of interpersonal violence that include intimate partner violence, family/parental violence, gender-based violence, rape and sexual abuse, bullying/harassment, suicide/self-harm, first responder/military exposure to violence, intergroup violence, social and cultural discrimination and oppression, and war/genocide. Given the magnitude of this problem and despite the evidence-based validity of EMDR as a unique and powerful treatment for trauma and adversity, EMDR presentations, articles, research, and collaborative discussion on this topic have been limited and need further development

THE PURPOSE:

This conference will be the first-ever global teaching-learning event to present and advance EMDR-based interventions to address interpersonal violence. Presenters at the conference will be pioneering thinkers and contributors who will speak to the needs of individual EMDR practitioners, organizational leaders, intervention project designers, and researchers. Participants will be informed about an array of cutting-edge developments in individual and group intervention protocols and strategies. Overall, this unique training event is designed to improve clinical skills, promote research, and to catalyze collaborative development of EMDR as an intervention for interpersonal violence.

CONFERENCE FEATURES:

This conference will offer similar features of the highly acclaimed 2018 conference on EMDR Early Intervention (emdrearlyintervention.com). Presentations will be varied and relatively brief (most 30-90 minutes) and will include intervention concepts and strategies, specific EMDR methods and protocols, and supporting materials. An “all in one room” format means presenters will be participants at each other’s presentations, and participants will not have to choose between workshops. This format will create a shared body of knowledge and stimulate collaborative discussion. In addition to individual presentations, the program will include moderated panel discussions that aim to produce ‘here and now’ integration of the content the conference will generate. Opportunities will also be provided for formal and informal collaborative discussions including meetings on special interest topics.

This conference is for you if you are:

- A clinician interested in more effective EMDR strategies for your clients who have experienced violence related trauma
- A clinician interested in more effective EMDR strategies for your clients who act out with aggression or abuse
- A clinician or organization wanting to establish EMDR based violence intervention services (continued on next page)

- A clinician or organization treating first-responders and active duty military
- An EMDRIA Approved Consultant or EMDR Trainer who wants to be informed of cutting-edge interventions
- A TRN, CRN or other community based Early Intervention Specialist wanting additional strategies for post-violence interventions
- A researcher interested in designing and/or conducting EMDR-topic related research
- A humanitarian stakeholder, NGO representative, allied professional, or donor interested in learning about EMDR-based services for interpersonal violence

Conference Highlights:

Single track, everyone in the same room participation to build a shared knowledge base

Opportunities for special interest groups' discussions, and time for informal meetings with colleagues

Participation on-site or via live stream/delayed viewing
